1. There is a Soviet Naval Air Unit Headquarters in Chongjin (Seishin) (149-49, 41-46).
2. The following Soviet officers are attached to unidentified air units in North Korea: Colonel Izyanski, commander of a regiment; Sokolov (rank unknown), commander of a division; General Kronid; General Tskhin; and General Yutkov.
3. At the Chongjin air field there are facilities to accommodate heavy aircraft.
4. The two airfields in the Chongjin area* are closely guarded by Soviet troops. At these two airfields there are more than 100 Japanese airplanes with the Soviet Army insignia painted over the original (Japanese) markings on the airplanes. In the latter part of July 1947, one of these airplanes crashed in Chongjin and the two pilots, both Soviet women, were killed. This has led the people in the Chongjin area to believe that many of the pilots in that area are women.

* Notes: [redacted] There is one airfield four miles N of Chongjin and one mile NNW of the Naam-Chongjin road and possibly another airfield two miles SE of Chongjin.)
